Dave:

Thanks for the comments. We will make a few adjustments.

One question:

We will definitely make the slide #2 changes you suggest. Even with those though, do you think that showing the harbor on it's "side" is a big negative? We tried several different ways to show it in a north=up orientation, and it just gets so small that it becomes unreadable. The "sideways" view allows us to show the whole thing in at a readable size, but if you think that we will just be confusing the lay-person too much, maybe we will go back to vertical orientation.

Thanks Jay. They look good. I offer the following suggestions mostly to provide better clarity to the lay audience:

1. slide #2: labeling major features like 195, Popes Island, Rt 6, hurricane barrier, etc. (and adding a north arrow?) should greatly help get the audience to understand that the harbor is shown on its side here
2. slide #9 (showing the 3 CAD cells): I think it would help if you show more of the area/harbor surrounding the CADs so the audience knows what the heck they're looking at. Even if it means making the title box smaller and deleting the 5 stakeholder logo's.
3. slide #10: I would delete this slide: shown out of context it may tend to "scare" some people away from CADs (i.e. looks deeper than it really is). Alternatively show the cell within a slide that shows the entire lower harbor (or at least 195 to Rt 6)
4. last slide: suggest finding a replacement slide for the photo on the left that shows what looks like a very visible turbidity plume.

Thanks again - Dave

Copy of what we sent Kristin. 13 actual slides and one Questions? Slide at the end - so a little bit longer than I had indicated. Sounds like Kristin may add a slide for statistics (how much contaminated material dredged and put in CADs, etc..). I think she might also want to rearrange some of the slides. Once we get her comments and make her changes, I will get you an updated version. Thanks. - J
